I have not worked here for very long, but I can honestly say I feel much gratitude for this community. The small things do really make a difference. The kindness of coworkers who brighten the day with a smile, a laugh, or a thoughtful word. Or as simple as a conversation, to a full blown group chat. Jokes, laughter, and great interactions are all within my experience here so far! It turns a simple job into something more, surrounded by people who lift each other up, and becomes a place I truly enjoy being part of. I am also deeply thankful for the residents. Having the chance to serve and spend time with those who helped shape the world that we are part of today is a privilege that makes everyday worthwhile! The stories, the conversations, the joy and laughter, and even the quiet simple moments remind me why this job is so Gratitude is a feeling, but it is also a practice. It's the recognition and appreciation of what is good in life. Many strive for more, many count what they don't have, and sometimes it's hard to see what is good in life, but that is okay, and we should live with gratitude and allow ourselves to count each blessing so we know what is good in our lives! I am grateful to be part of a place where the community is built on kindness.
